LAST MENDONCA ART SALE.

Keen Bidding for Pictures in the Collection at the Waldorf.

Prices at the closing session of the sale of the Salvador de Mendonca collection by the Fifth Avenue Art Galleries at the Waldorf-Astoria last night ranged from $10 for small water colors to $2,900. The total returns for the evening were $46,570, and for the three nights' sale $106,937.

One of the interesting pictures of the sale was a life-size portrait of Abraham Lincoln, standing, by William T. Mathews, with an autograph letter from President Hayes, which went to the Anglo-American Art Company for $2,100. Twelve oval miniatures of famous men of the United States, Stephen Decatur, Oliver H. Perry, Robert Fulton, among them, mounted together in one large frame, sold for $460, going to D. J. Leversee.

PICTURE SALE BRINGS $27,870

A Corot and a Valesquez Among Paintings Bought at Mendonca Auction.

The first of a three evenings' sale of a collection of paintings belonging to Señor Salvador de Mendonca, former Minister from Brazil to the United States, together with paintings from other collections, was held in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria under the auspices of the Fifth Avenue Art Galleries, last night, with returns of $27,870 for eighty-one pictures.

"Ruins in Italy," a small Corot, brought one of the high prices of the evening, $1,750, going to T. C. Prentice, and "Portrait of a Spanish Prince," by Velasquez, went to J. J. Cleveland for the same price. J. Little paid $900 for the "Duchesse d'Enville," by Tournières; J. Eastman Janes $700 for "Sunset," by Aimé Perret; J. J. Cleveland $500 for a "Sunset," by Léon Richet, pupil of Diaz; W. E. Burke $700 for a portrait of "Adrienne Lecouvreur"; C. P. Bernard $725 for "St. Jerome," by Berchem, and A. B. Gloster gave $590 for a tiny "Italian Landscape," 10 inches by 14, by George Inness.

A small head, "La Suppliante," by Greuze, brought the highest price of the evening, going to W. H. Williamson for $2,600. The "Head of a Boy," Correggio, brought the second highest price, $2,200, selling through O'Reilly, agent. H. D. Babcock paid $1,000 for a charming landscape by A. M. Corter, and "Doña Mendoza de la Cerda," by Pantoja de la Cruz, went to A. W. Ingersoll for $950. The sale will be continued this evening.

Richard Wilson, R. A.

ENGLAND

Born at Pinegas, Montgomeryshire, August 1, 1713; died at Llanberris, Carnarvonshire, May, 1782. Pupil of Thomas Wright, a London portrait painter. Began to paint landscapes in Italy about 1749, taking this step by the advice of Zuccarelli. His work was not appreciated in England during his lifetime, and he died in indigence, but he is now regarded as one of the chief landscape painters of the English School. He was one of the founders of the Royal Academy.

VIEW OF THE THAMES NEAR SION HOUSE, TWICKENHAM

A river with a winding road, a sailboat coming down the stream, and a tree in the foreground with two men near the trunk, one of whom is preparing to bathe, are the principal elements in this composition. In the stern of the boat there is smoke from a fire on which probably the crew are cooking their supper. The sky shows summer atmosphere with clouds lit up on the edges, and the pastoral feeling is well interpreted. An individual and very interesting example of Wilson's excellent work. Dated 1769.

Ricci Sebastiano

ITALY

Born at Cividale di Belluno in 1659, died in Venice May 15, 1734. Venetian School. Pupil in Venice of F. Cervelli, whom he accompanied to Milan; resided several years in Florence, Rome and other Italian cities, studying and executing many works. From Vienna, where he decorated the Palace of Schönbrunn, he went to England, in the reign of Queen Anne, and during a ten years' residence painted the chapel at Bulstrode for the Duke of Portland, the hall of Burlington House, an altar piece for the chapel of Chelsea College, and other works, some of which are at Hampton Court. With a fertile invention and great facility of execution, Sebastiano excelled in imitating the great masters of the Venetian School, especially Paolo Veronese. In 1718 he returned to Venice, where he lived, rich and honored, until his death.

FRANCE

Born in Paris in 1763; died in 1843. Pupil of Taunay and was known in his time as a fine copyist. He had but little reputation in his day as a painter, but his pictures are now classed by many critics with the works of Decamps and the Barbizon Group. His landscapes are much sought for by collectors.

LANDSCAPE NEAR PARIS

A broad road leads down hill from the foreground, winding into the middle distance. A flock of sheep and some small figures are seen at the bend in the road, and there are windmills on the left. The middle distance is in shadow, and the hills at the horizon are lighted up by a gleam of sunshine. The sky is heavy with clouds of gray, white and black; and the picture is firmly composed in color masses and great lines.

Height, 23 inches; width, 28½ inches.

17

William Hogarth

ENGLAND

Born in London, December 10, 1697; died there, October 26, 1764. After being apprenticed to a silversmith, from whom he learned to engrave arms and monograms on plate, he became a student in St. Martin's Lane Academy. He began business as a silversmith about 1720, and engraved book-plates. He afterward took up portrait painting and achieved good success. In 1753 he completed a series of six pictures called "The Harlot's Progress," which was followed by other series called "The Rake's Progress," and "Marriage à la Mode" series of six pictures, and seven other works.

PORTRAIT OF COLONEL CHARLES HOWARD

In the left upper corner of the canvas is a coat of arms and the inscription, "Charles Howard, Esqr., Colonel of a Regiment of Foot, second son of Charles, third Earl of Carlisle." The figure is dressed in a coat and waistcoat of blue with a white shirt-front. The face is rosy, and the expression of the blue-eyed Colonel is frank and engaging. The painting is careful and characteristic.

HOLLAND

Born in Amsterdam in 1635 or 1636; died there January 21, 1672. Pupil of Willem van de Velde the elder, and afterward at Haarlem, of Jan Wynants. After leaving Wynants he studied the figure under Philip Wouwerman, and further developed under the influence of Paul Potter. His "Frozen Canal" is in the Louvre, and other works are in the principal European museums.

MILKING TIME

A group of cows and sheep, with landscape. In the centre of the group is a red and white cow, with a black one at the left, which a woman is milking. A boy hangs over the fence, laughing and pointing to a calf or young heifer sleeping in the foreground. Trees, a distant prospect of country, and a fine sky of delicate blue, with gray clouds tinged with pink, are the other elements in this pleasing composition. Painted in the manner characteristic of this celebrated painter of the Dutch school

Born in Seville; baptized June 6, 599; died in Madrid, August 7, 1660. Pupil of Herrara el Viego and of Francis Pacheco, whose daughter he married in 1618.

PORTRAIT OF A SPANISH PRINCE

This portrait was known in the collection of the Duchess de Berry as the portrait of the Infanta Maria Teresa, but the title was erroneous, as is shown by the masculine gender of the participle natus in the inscription painted on the canvas: "Natus Anno MDCXXX dies Septembris III." Maria Theresa was born in 1638. It is probably a portrait of the Infante Don Baltazar Carlos. The little prince stands by a table, with his left hand resting upon it, near a high crowned hat. He is dressed in a costume of old rose color, with scarlet sleeves, and a white ruff of lace about the neck. The right hand holds one of the green and white lacing strings of his dress, and from his neck, on a string of large red and gold beads, hangs a medal of the Holy Sepulchre. The child's face is attractive, and the flesh tints and the pale reddish color of the hair are delightfully rendered. The work is characteristic of the master, both in the effect of the masses when seen at a distance, and by the perfect finish of the details when seen near by. The color scheme is handsome, and the general aspect of the picture is stately and charming.

SOCIAL GATHERING IN THE PARK

Born in Paris, January 22, 1690; died there, September 14, 1743. Pupil of Dulin and of Gillot, but formed his style chiefly after Watteau. The pictures of the two artists are sometimes confounded, as the subjects are similar, and Lancret's treatment follows that of Watteau. Ten of Lancret's works are in the Louvre; others in French provincial museums, and in various European galleries.

The scene is in a garden with a terrace wall and a high vase on the left. A group of five figures, consisting of three young women and two men. In the middle of the group a girl with a flute is learning to play, while a man who is teaching her sits beside her. Another woman is reclining on the grass, and back of her is a man who stands up while he converses with the third woman, who is seated on the grass, with her back turned to the spectator. The costumes are light in color—white, pink and blue—and these tints form an effective contrast to the green of the landscape background. No. 1133 in the Metayer de Guy Collection.

ORIENTAL LANDSCAPE WITH FIGURES

Four Arabs are seen seated in a tent pitched among some ruins, and a dragoman, dressed in a crimson robe and white turban, stands near by, leaning on a staff. A camel appears back of the tent with a load on his back. Among the ruins are some tall, ornamented columns, and the sky shows the clear blue of the Far East. The color scheme is brilliant and effective, and the picture is painted with knowledge and force.

Gustave Courbet

FRENCH

Born at Ornans, France 1819, commenced to study law in Paris, but drifted round the studios and studied the old masters in the Louvre. Independent, he would have nothing of the academical or romantic schools, and struck out for realism; first attracting attention by his "Dinner of Ornans" in 1849. At the Expositions of 1855 and 1867 he made an exhibition of his works in a separate building, outside the grounds. Two years later, Munich honored him with a separate room and the Bavarian Order of St. Michael. He accepted it, but refused the Legion of Honor. During the Commune he was elected Minister of Fine Arts, and to save The Louvre was forced to consent to the destruction of The Vendome Column. For this he was imprisoned and fined; after which he retired to Vevay in Switzerland, and died there in 1878.

ON THE SEA-SHORE

A woman, whose shoulders are covered with a red shawl, sits with her back to the spectator before a long table on the beach covered with fish, which she offers for sale. Nearby is a man on a white horse, the bridle held by a fisherman with a red cap, and there are some small figures in the distance. The sky at the lower right portion of the picture is dark and threatening, and the sea lies beneath it with fine pearly tone. Jean Baptiste Greuze

FRANCE

Born at Tournus, Saône-et-Loire, France, August 21, 1725; died in Paris, March 21, 1805. Pupil, in Lyons, of Brandon; and in Paris, of the Academy. His pictures early became popular, and he accumulated a large fortune; but lost it all in the Revolution. The vogue of David and his school, and the taste for the classic as interpreted by these painters, prevented any further success for Greuze, and he died in poverty. His celebrated picture, "La Cruche Cassée," and fourteen other pictures and portraits are in The Louvre. Other important European Museums contain examples of his work.

Correggio

ITALY

HEAD OF A BOY

Real name, Antonio Allegri. Born at Correggio about 1494; died there, March 5, 1534. Pupil of his father's brother, Lorenzo Allegri and of Antonio Bartolotti, painters of the town of Correggio of no great repute. At Modena is said to have been a pupil of Ferrari, but all the accounts of Correggio's early training lack confirmation. No one has been able to trace the origin and development of his method of painting, which is unlike that of any of his contempories. In grace and elegance, in tenderness and sweetness of expression, and in skilful execution his works are unrivalled. One of the greatest masters of the Italian Renaissance. Important works in the Louvre, in the Dresden Gallery, and at Parma.

A curly haired, chubby faced boy looking over his nude shoulder. This head may have served as a study for one of Correggio's great compositions. Time has given to the picture a beautiful golden tone. and the color is delicious. From the collection of Mr. Bevan, Trent Park, Hertfordshire, England.

Height, 12 inches; width, 11¼ inches.

Gerard Terburg

HOLLAND

Born at Zwolle, probably between 1613 and 1617, died at Deventer, December 8, 1681. Dutch School; genre painter. Received his first instruction from his father, Gert Terburg (1584-1662) who had studied in Rome. He then formed himself in Amsterdam, and especially in Haarlem, where he entered the Guild in 1635 under the influence of Frans Hals, and through independent study of the masterworks of Titian, Rembrandt and Velasques. Travelled through Germany, Italy, Spain, England, and France; and painted everywhere portraits and genre pieces. In 1646-48 at Münster, he became, through the favor of the Spanish envoy to Madrid, the painter of the diplomatic circle, and executed the famous portrait group of the Peace Congress; followed the Spanish envoy to Madrid, where he painted the King and many courtiers and ladies; returned via England and France to his native country and settled at Deventer where he obtained the citizenship in 1655 and afterwards became Burgomaster. He was the inventor of the interiors, and of the satin gown, so much used by Miers and Metsu; a first rate and thoroughly original master.

THE WRECKERS

Height, 25 inches; length, 30 inches.

From the collection of William Howgate Esq. A scene on the sea-shore, with a great cliff on the right of the composition. A group of people is seen about a sail boat drawn up on the beach, and a vessel stranded appears off shore, with the wind blowing into rags what is left of her sails. Only one mast is left standing. A figure of a woman in the group, clad in a white cloak, makes a strong note in the color scheme, which is conceived in sober tints and the sky shows the fury of the weather.

This picture is painted in that style of the master where he resembles Gainsborough.

FRANCE

Born at Pierrelaye, Seine-et-Oise, France; died in Paris a few years ago. Well known as one of the leading landscape painters of the French School. He received various medals at the Salon and high honors at the Paris Exposition of 1889. Chevalier of the Legion of Honour.

LANDSCAPE

Height, 25¾ inches; length, 36½ inches.

The picture shows a foreground descending to a stream in a valley with a high bank on the opposite side. A village is seen nestled among the trees in the valley, and on the hill opposite there are houses. Tall trees growing on the border of the stream reach up nearly to the top of the canvas and the sky is full of light. All the foreground is in transparent shadow, and on the distant hills to the left is seen a gleam of late afternoon sunshine. A very characteristic example of the work of a painter whose fine qualities are distinctly personal.

ENGLAND

Born in London, December 10, 1697 died there October 26, 1764. Son of Richard Hogarth, schoolmaster; apprenticed to Ellis Gamble, Silversmith, to learn to engrave arms and cyphers on plate. When his time had expired (1718) became a student in St. Martin's Lane Academy, where he learned to draw. About 1720 he set up in business as a silversmith, and began to engrave book-plates, the first of his prints to attract notice being a series of illustrations for Butler's Hudibras (1726). In 1730 he clandestinely married the daughter of Sir Jas. Thornhill, serjeant-painter to the King, whose studio he had frequented. As his book-plates were not profitable he set up as a portrait painter and met with considerable success.

John Constable, R.A.

ENGLAND

Born at East Bergholt, Suffolk, England, June 11, 1776; died in London, March 30, 1837. Pupil of the Royal Academy and afterward of Joseph Farrington and R. R. Reinagle. He at first painted portraits and historical subjects, but took up landscape and exhibited his first picture in 1802. He was not elected a royal academician until 1829, and his work was not appreciated or liked in his native country during his life time. In France he was recognized as a man of talent and new ideas, and French painters thought highly of his work. He is now generally considered one of the great English painters, and his pictures are in many Continental museums. Two are in the Louvre, and there are examples of his work in the Metropolitan Museum, New York.

PORTRAIT OF THE ARTIST

This picture is known as "The Handsome Miller" and shows the figure in three-quarters length seated in an arm chair. The head is turned full to the spectator and shows a manly, frank face. A table behind the chair has two books on it, and in one hand the artist holds a small leather covered volume. He is dressed in a dark blue coat and wears a white stock. An open window gives a view of a landscape in the distance. Head, figure, hands, and all the accessories are admirably painted.

Height, 50 inches; width, 40 inches.

Michael Wohlgemuth

GERMANY

Born in Nuremberg in 1434, died there November 30, 1519. German school; history and portrait painter. After receiving instruction in art, probably from his father, he, like other apprentices, spent three years in wandering about Germany and the Netherlands, and then settled at Nuremberg where he first appears as a citizen in 1474. He opened a large studio or rather workshop in which he and his numerous apprentices painted religious pictures to order; and made designs for such wood-cuts as those which fill the pages of the famous" Chronicle of Nuremberg." His best pictures show considerable dramatic feeling, and are painted in clear, strong color.

Sir Joshua Reynolds, P. R. A.

ENGLAND

Born at Plympton, Devonshire, England, July 16, 1723; died in London, February 23, 1792. He went to London in 1741 as a pupil of Thomas Hudson, in about two years returned to Plympton and painted portraits at low prices. In 1746 he again went to London and began to practice his profession there. In 1749 he accompanied Commodore Keppel, afterward Lord Keppel, on a trip to the Mediterranean, and while in Rome, making studies in the Sistine Chapel, caught a cold, which brought on permanent deafness. After two years in Rome and sojourns in other Italian cities, he settled down in London in 1753. In 1768 he was chosen first president of the Royal Academy and was knighted by George III. He exhibited 245 works in the Academy, his contributions averaging eleven a year. He died unmarried, and was buried in St. Paul's Cathedral. He is generally conceded to be the greatest of England's portrait painters. The National Gallery contains some of the best works, but there are others in public museums and private collections. Siru Joshua painted all the great men of his day and many beautiful women. The list of his portraits is a long catalogue of notables.

PORTRAIT OF DR. SAMUEL ARNOLD

MUSICAL COMPOSER

The head, slightly bent forward, is seen in profile over the sitter's shoulder. A white peruke and a gray coat make up the costume. In the background there is a pillar on the left and a sky with dark clouds. The face shows strong character, and the painting shows solidity and able modelling.

LANDSCAPE IN THE NORTH OF ENGLAND

Height, 20½ inches; length, 27 inches.

The scene shows a hayfield with men and carts at work and an enormous hay stack. A cottage is seen embowered in the trees on the right, and a woman in a red cloak in the foreground is going toward the house. In the distance is a village with a church tower. The sky is full of white clouds with a bit of blue near the top of the canvas. The general aspect of the picture is light and the color is fresh and agreeable in tone. The work shows great truth of observation and is a picturesque scene of country life.

PORTRAIT OF ELIZABETH, DUCHESS OF WELLINGTON.

Height, 51 inches; width, 35 inches.

Painted by Sir E. Landseer as a study for his famous picture "Wellington revisiting the plains of Waterloo." Her portrait appears in Findon's "Female Aristocracy." At the time when the picture was painted, the subject of it was Lady Elizabeth Hay, and her father the eighth Marquis of Tweeddale, was a friend of the then Marquess of Douro in 1849, but he died in 1884 having succeeded to the title in 1852. Elizabeth, Duchess of Wellington, was in her eighty-fifth year at the time of her death. From 1843 to 1858 she was Lady of the Bedchamber to Queen Victoria, and from 1861 to 1868, and again, from 1874 to 1880, Mistress of the Robes to her late Majesty.

Born at Bristol, England, June 28, 1812; died there September 8, 1845. Son of a German clergyman who was Curator of the Bristol Museum, and pupil of the landscape painter J. B. Pyne. Exhibited "Destruction of Old London Bridge" at the Royal Academy in 1833. Visited Germany, Italy, Greece, and Egypt, 1834-1838, and accompanied the Expedition of Sir Charles Fellowes to Lycia, bringing back many studies of Oriental scenes and types. Two of his pictures are in the National Gallery, London.

ARABS RESTING

On a rug spread on the sand some Arabs are resting in a desolate country with ruins in the distance and a camel near by. The place is bare and rocky, with high hills on the left, and the sky of deep blue is broken with clouds. A strong, effective work, with a well managed color scheme of positive tints.

14 December, 1880.

MR. MATHEWS:

I am not a judge of works of art and would not venture to buy an expensive picture on my own unaided judgment.

Your picture of Mr. Lincoln which hangs in the vestibule of this house seems to me to be an excellent one, and if approved by those better qualified to decide on its merits than I am I would strongly recommend its purchase by the Government, I am confident it is much better than any other which I have seen. Sincerely,

Paolo Veronese

ITALY

Born in Verona in 1528; died in Venice, April 19, 1588. His real name was Paolo Caliari, or Cagliari, and he was the son of Gabriei Caliari, a sculptor. Vasari says he was a pupil of Giovanni Carato, but according to Ridolfi, his master was Antonio Badile. After painting in Verona and in Mantua, he settled in Venice, where he executed most of his work. He shared the most important commissions, when he was in his prime, with Tintoretto, for Titian was at that time very old. He received many honors from royal and ducal patrons and admirers, and his is one of the greatest names in the art of the Italian Renaissance.

ESTHER BEFORE AHASUERUS

From the Blenheim Collection of the Duke of Marlborough. At the left of the picture King Ahasuerus is seated on his throne, with a secretary and a soldier on his right, and two courtiers on his left. He is in the act of conferring sovereign power upon Queen Esther, who receives it kneeling, while four maids of honor and a page support the train of her robe. The Queen's costume is of splendid figured stuff, richly embroidered, and on her shoulders is a mantle of gold and white, with a light blue lining. Her crown sits on her blonde head, and a string of pearls hangs from it. The ladies in waiting are in rich robes of rose color, white, and gold, with tassels attached to the sleeves. The groups made by the Queen and her ladies are painted in full light, when the figure of the Queen dominating the composition. The King and his attendants are in shadow. The background, with great ornamented pillars, archways, columns, and other architectural forms, shows a vista of sky and buildings without. The composition is very imposing, and the work is painted with a rich color scheme, in the masterly style of the great artist.

Height, 66½ inches; length, 85 inches.

Jose De Ribera

Called Lo Spagnoletto

SPAIN

Born at Jativa, Spain, January 12, 1588; died in Naples in 1656. Pupil in Valencia of Francisco Ribalta. He went to Rome when quite young, and studied there. He was nicknamed by his fellows, Lo Spagnoletto (the little Spaniard) and was without resources. After studying with Caravaggio, he went to Parma, and finally settling in Naples, he married there the daughter of a rich picture dealer. He was made court painter by the Spanish viceroy, and soon had wealth and honors, and inhabited a palace where he entertained sumptuously. Ribera was of a very jealous disposition and made war on the artists of rival Italian Schools who were employed in Naples. He was made a member of the Academy of St. Luke in 1630, and was knighted by Pope Innocent X. in 1644. His "Entombment of Christ" and two other works are in the Louvre, and other important works are in the principal European Museums.

MARTYRDOM OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW

This picture was brought to England from Spain after the Peninsular War by the Duke of Wellington. The saint, an old man, nude, except for a
